The Community at the Close: An Intentional Community at the Cathedral

As we look further into the future, our mission of fishing with nets and oars, rowing, or perhaps just paddling, may soon be filled with new opportunities. As we continue to grow and change, our older program may become redundant. It may be that we will need to reassess our goals and priorities in order to ensure that our mission remains relevant and effective. In the midst of these changes, we must remain vigilant and proactive in our efforts to achieve our objectives. With a clear vision and a robust strategy, we will be well-positioned to continue our work of reaching out to those in need and bringing hope to those who are despairing.

Looking to the Year Ahead

With 5:11 acres, four gardens, three parks, and a diverse range of experiences, the Cathedral Church of Saint John the Divine occupies a unique and significant space within the city of New York. Through its various programs and initiatives, the Cathedral seeks to promote spiritual well-being and social justice, while also providing opportunities for cultural and artistic expression. With its grand architecture and beautiful grounds, the Cathedral serves as a peaceful and inspiring oasis in the heart of the city.

Conclusion

In conclusion, the Cathedral Church of Saint John the Divine stands as a testament to the power of community and the importance of preserving and fostering a sense of place. As we continue to build upon the foundation laid by our predecessors, we must remain committed to our mission and to the values that guide our work. With dedication, passion, and a willingness to learn and grow, we can continue to make a positive impact on the lives of those we serve and on the world around us.

Life Cycle: The Columbarium Expands

In addition to being a place of peace and reflection, the Cathedral Church of Saint John the Divine also serves as a place of healing and renewal. Our Columbarium, which is located in the south transept, offers a beautiful and serene atmosphere for those who wish to spend time in quiet contemplation. The Columbarium was first established in 2006 and has since been expanded to accommodate an additional 500 burials. With its striking stone vaults and elegant architecture, the Columbarium provides a fitting resting place for those who wish to be remembered.

Reflection From The Dean

The Right Reverend Clifton Daniel III

William’s Shakespeare has a play to Richard III with these words—“How now, you Lincoln; your city stinks.” To that I would add a couple of not commonly known facts about William Shakespeare’s The Contemplation of a Death. The plot is a bit more complex, and there’s a little more to the story. According to the dictionary, a particular place or region can be described as “endemic.” This usage of the term is somewhat contentious, particularly in the context of public health. Nonetheless, I am willing to concede that certain diseases can be considered endemic—those that naturally occur and may become more frequent or widespread in a particular population. This is particularly true of certain infectious diseases, such as the common cold or influenza. We are currently experiencing a pandemic, and it is important to consider the role that contagious diseases play in shaping human societies and cultures.

Looking to the Year Ahead

As we look ahead, we can see a number of important trends and developments that will shape the future of the Cathedral Church of Saint John the Divine. One of the most significant of these is the ongoing process of renewal and transformation. The Cathedral has been undergoing a number of changes in recent years, including the expansion of its facilities and the addition of new programs and services. These changes are part of a broader effort to ensure that the Cathedral remains a dynamic and relevant institution well into the future.

Conclusion

In conclusion, the Cathedral Church of Saint John the Divine is a place of rich history and cultural significance. As we continue to build upon the foundation laid by our predecessors, we must remain committed to our mission and to the values that guide our work. With dedication, passion, and a willingness to learn and grow, we can continue to make a positive impact on the lives of those we serve and on the world around us.
As it has always done, well before the pandemic, we were forced to shut the Great Bronze Doors. But even as an operational necessity, we found new ways to continue our most crucial services running, whether in person or via livestream. Our response to the pandemic—one of national tragedy, including to the assassination of Haitian president Jovenel Moïse—was a time of mourning the tens of thousands lost in Morningside Heights and the surrounding area, and honoring those who cared for the sick and dying.
